Synopsis When she was in her childhood, Bharti spent a couple of years in the mountains of Uttarakhand with her grandfather, who was a guide. She remembers how he'd carry her all day on his shoulders, watchful of mountains and snakes. She still sees his face in her dreams. After his death, Bharti and her husband return to their old house on the forested hillside where they met for the first time. It's a wonderland of boulders and undergrowth. Even today, it feels sacred and gives off a mystical feeling. There are no modern appliances like television and satellite, and the house is filled with memories. She finds a letter dated from that year, telling her that he'd died in a car accident on his way back from a nearby village. A few years later, she decides to go to the mountains again, not knowing that her husband has died. This time she won't be a tourist. She's determined to meet her grandfather in the mountains and return home.
